HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfillment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

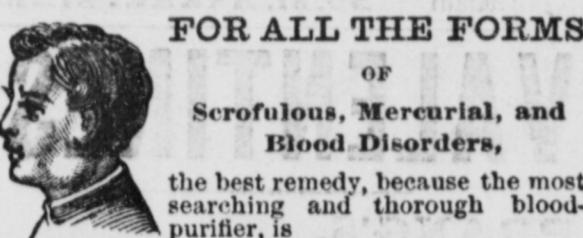

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

NOTICE.

IT having been asserted that I am preparing to move to the country and give up my interest in the Sewing Machine business, I take this method of announcing to my friends and the public that there is not a word of truth in it except that I will move my family to the country but will continue to sell the OLD RELIABLE SINGER at the same place, second street, opposite postoffice, and run my wagons in the country as heretofore. Competitors please notice the above. I am thankful to the public for the large patronage I have received for the past nine years, and respectfully solicit a share in the future.

Commodore Vanderbilt's Widow.

An interesting rumor comes to me from New Orleans to the effect that General George Pierre (he has dropped the Pierre, though, I believe) Toussaint Beauregard is about to marry Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, the widow of the dead Commodore. Beauregard, as all the world knows, was one of the greatest engineer officers on either side in the late war. Carefully trained at West Point, where he graduated second in his class, in 1840, he rendered valuable services to the United States in the Mexican war, and invaluable services against it in the war of the Rebellion. He is considered, to-day, one of the foremost military engineers of his time by competent critics. Some of them contend that he is the equal of any engineer since Vauban. Certain it is that he is very highly spoken of, and that some of his work—that at Manassas battlefield, in Virginia, for example—is pointed out by the older engineer officers of the army as a model for the young lieutenants of the corps. He is, however, nothing more than a great engineer. He was not a good fighter, and, after the war, he failed signal in an attempt to revive a Southern railroad which was on its feet within six months after he left its Presidency, and is now striding forward into permanent prosperity. Perhaps, since we have no great engineering work for him to do General Beauregard is best employed as he is at present in assisting to manage a lottery enterprise at a salary of $10,000 a year. General Beauregard is a short, shapely, handsome old gentleman with gray hair and white mustache and a ruddy face. He has the appearance and accomplishments of a courtier of the days of Louis XIV., and, withal, hosts of friends. He has buried two wives, and has a married son and a married daughter in New Orleans. Mrs. Vanderbilt was the reigning belle of Mobile while yet very young, in the years immediately preceding the war. She was not pretty, but was exceedingly attractive—"handsome," "stylish," "lovely," as the old beaus say. She married William Elliott, a New Orleans lawyer, but they did not agree with one another, and finally separated by way of the courts. For several years Mrs. Elliott, who was still very attractive, supported herself and mother by teaching music. They had met the Vanderbilts before her first marriage, and it is said that the Commodore, who admired them, quietly contributed to their support through her mother after her separation from her husband. Be this as it may, they met again in the North, after the war, and when Mrs. Vanderbilt died Mr. Vanderbilt married Mrs. Elliott. Now she is a handsome widow of about forty, with a legacy of $800,000—$10,000 for each year of her life with the Commodore, as some one has observed—and nothing to prevent her from marrying anybody she pleases to marry. Mrs. Vanderbilt is, as is well known, like her late husband, a great admirer of the Rev. Dr. Deems of the Church of the Strangers, New York City. Vanderbilt University, at Nashville, Tenn., probably owes its existence to the appeals made by Dr. Deems and Mrs. Vanderbilt to the dead millionaire. General Beauregard, a creole in everything else, is presumably a member of the Roman Catholic Church.

—Correspondent Philadelphia Record.

Charles Lamb represented the ordinary church-goer. "You don't seem to be any better for what I said to you," complained his friend. "No," was the beautiful and charitable reply, "but the man who sat near me must be, because it all went in at one ear and out at the other."

Bill Nye's Advice to a Correspondent.

She may be giddy, but she's just about sized you up in shape, and no doubt if you keep on trying to love her without her knowledge or consent she will hit you with something and put a Swiss sunset over your eye. Do not yearn to win her affections all at once. Give her twenty or thirty years in which to see your merits. You will have more to entitle you to her respect by that time, no doubt. During that time you may rise to be President and win a deathless name.

The main thing you have to look out for now is to restrain yourself from marrying people who do not want to marry you. That style of freshness will, in thirty or forty years, wear away. If it does not, probably the vigorous big brother of some "young lady of fourteen" will consign you to the silent tomb. Do not try to promenade with a young lady unless she gives her consent. Do not marry one against her wishes. Give the girl a chance. She will appreciate it; and, even though she may not marry you, she will permit you to sit on the fence and watch her when she goes to marry some one else. Do not be despondent. Be courageous, and some day perhaps you will get there. At present the horizon is a little bit foggy.

As you say, she may be so giddy that she doesn't want steady company. There is a glimmer of hope in that. She may be waiting till she gets over the agony and annoyance of teething before she looks seriously into the matter of matrimony. If that should turn out to be the case we are not surprised. Give her a chance to grow up, and in the meantime go and learn the organ-grinder's profession, and fix yourself so that you can provide for a family. Sometimes a girl only seventeen years old is able to discern that a young intellectual giant like you is not going to make a dazzling success of life as a husband. Brace up and try to forget your sorrow, and you may be happy yet.—Laramie Boomerang.

Farm Management.

No fixed rules can be laid down for the management of farms. The soil of one township may be best fitted for growing some kind of grain, while the adjoining ones can be most profitably devoted to live stock. No two farms situated side by side are exactly alike. The distance from market, the demand for special products, and, not the least, the individual taste of the farmer, have all much weight in determining the system of farm management that is best to adopt. Those who have given the most thought to this subject, are the slowest to advise any general system to be applied to every farm. It is like a garment that is intended to fit all persons, and suits none. Every year of progress made in agricultural knowledge teaches more forcibly than previous ones, the truth that the farmer must rely largely upon his own intelligence and judgment in working out the best system for his own farm. Even in so seemingly trifling a matter as the pruning of a grape-vine, the wisest vineyardist can only give general rules, and each grape-grower must adapt them to the peculiarities of each vine.—American Agriculturist.

—Cricket and foot-ball seem, says the New York Sun, to require British soil to nourish them to a high degree of perfection. Even a team of Americanized lads were totally unable to cope with a Canadian team on the Hoboken grounds recently. It is only when he can induce his cousin to play base ball with him that Brother Jonathan comes out strong.

THE water is in many cellars on Second street.

Gas has been cut off everywhere in the city except in the First Ward.

THE public school in East Maysville has been closed until the waters subside.

MESSRS. PEARCE & BROS, have one thousand sacks of wheat under water in their warehouse on Wall street.

THE Maysville telegraph operators are having a holiday, as the wires are under water and not working except to Covington.

THE Town Council of Ripley has appropriated the sum of $12,000 to be used for the purpose of encouraging manufacturing in that place.

A DOG was rescued this morning from a floating fodder shock by driftwood catchers. He seems to be none the worse from his long water voyage.

WHEAT in this county is said to be looking much better than it did several weeks ago. The damage by the freezing weather is not so great as at first supposed.

ALL communication with East Maysville north of Third street has been cut off, except by means of the ferry at Limestone bridge and on Lexington street.

THE regular meetings of DeKalb and Ringgold Lodges, I. O. O. F., will not be held this and to-morrow evenings on account of the cutting off of the gas lights.

CAPT. M. C. HUTCHINS has received notice that a pension has been granted to Mrs. Eveline List, of Sand Hill, Lewis County, Ky., of eight dollars a month from August 11th 1881.

THE river rose a little over five inches last night, and his encroached upon Second at Limestone and at Wall. At the latter point it is within a few inches of the door of Daulton's stable, the mark it reached in 1847. It is rising slowly to-day.

WE have been asked by the Gas Company to say to consumers that it is dangerous to attempt to light their burners, while the works are in the present condition, as explosions are likely to occur under circumstances that cannot be fully explained here.

THE infant child of Martha McGowan, left at the door of one of our citizens last Saturday night, and returned to the mother a few hours later by Marshal Redmond, has been adopted by James Taylor, a colored resident of Maysville. Marshal Redmond is entitled to credit for his prompt disposal of this case.

MR. JOHN N. THOMAS is, probably, the only man in the State who ever owned a market house. The one in this city was sold to him on Monday for $166. It is reported that he intends to have the material made into canes and offered for sale to the friends and admirers of the old rookery, that they may have the opportunity to show their faith by their works.

John Wallingford's sale amounted to over $3,000. Mr. Wells was the auctioneer.

A gentleman friend of ours, near Fern Leaf, is about negotiating for a piece of Woods to add to his possessions. So report says.

Farewell Mr. One Eye Open, we are very sorry to lose such a valuable correspondent. Your items were read with interest. Mrs. Reporter admired your talent and all enjoyed your wit.

Uncle Campbell King gave a party to the young folk last week. Uncle Cam, enjoyed the party but got tired and went to bed about 11 o'clock. He is not as young as he was 50 years ago.

A very talented lady friend of ours was addressed by a gentleman who was rather repulsive to her than otherwise and being so nonplussed she made no reply, whereupon he said: I suppose silence gives consent, Miss." "Oh! God, no sir," she said.

Howard Farrow has built a steam corn mill at Mt. Gilead. We are afraid the old horse mill at that place will have to come down. It is a relic of the past.

M. B. Tolle, a very clever and upright gentleman, was out riding the other day and was met by Mr. Jones, who remarked to him that "that was a game horse." "Yes," said Mr. Tolle, "and a game man is riding it." Mr. Tolle is a bachelor.

We understand a lady whom we have always held in the very highest estimation, thinks we meant something disrespectful in our inquiry a few weeks since after the Wild Rose. Mr. Editor you will witness that we did not know whether the Wild Rose was he she or it. We have always held this friend of ours in the very highest estimation and only wanted to call forth the Wild Rose from its retirement. We never cast insinuations at a gentleman much less a lady.

We understand a neighbor wants to purchase fifty geese in order to annoy another neighbor. The other neighbor advertises for an old sow that is fond of geese.

A Possible Field for Railway Enterprise.

Some of the English papers are discussing the merits of a system of freight roads proposed for the manufacturing districts of Lancashire, England. In that region a vast amount of material, raw and manufactured, is subject to transportation for short distances. The railway charges are exceptionally high, and the cost of repeated handling adds materially to the burdens of manufacturers and dealers. For instance, a bale of cotton received at Liverpool is lifted out of the ship's hold and deposited on the quay. It is then lifted upon a cart and hauled to the railway station. There it is unloaded, and after one or more handlings is reloaded in a freight car, and after a long succession of shunting the car is marshaled into its proper train and started for Manchester. Here another series of handlings are in order, ending with the delivery of the cotton at the factory. From the mill back to the ship, the manufactured cloth is subject to the same treatment, largely enhancing its cost to the shipper. Indeed, owing to multiplied handlings and excessive railway charges, the cost of sending goods from Liverpool to Manchester is said to be actually greater than it used to be before railways were introduced.

The magnitude and urgency of the traffic forbid a return to the old cartage system for the whole journey; so a compromise is proposed in the form of a "plate way," on which ordinary wagons are to be hauled by steam motors.

The estimated cost of the plate way and its equipment is about $175,000 a mile, which would build a respectable railway in the American style. Obviously, the carrying capacity of a plate way used by ordinary road wagons would be much less than that of a regular railway.

The question arises whether the avoidance of repeated loading and unloading of freight could not be secured, and all the advantages of the railway retained, by simply transporting the loaded wagons upon properly constructed flat cars, to be hauled by locomotives in the usual way.

Of course this plan would be feasible only where the railway carriage was short, compared with the rest of the haulage, as, for example, between the wharf or warehouse of the city and the factory in the suburbs or in a near-by town, or between an outlying market garden district and the city market.

In many American cities from which railways radiate to all points of the compass, this method of transportation might prove decidedly economical, especially in saving repeated and destructive handlings of fruit and vegetables brought in from the surrounding country. The farmer's loaded wagon might be hauled upon a platform car, as upon a ferryboat, and carried with its team and driver to the city station, whence it could proceed to market without delay. Or those whose market business is extensive might have relays of horses and drivers, and send the loaded wagons only by rail.

Vast quantities of farm and garden produce are hauled in road wagons fifteen or twenty miles to city markets. Railway facilities for the larger part of the distance, and for distances considerably beyond the present range of road haulage, would seem to offer many advantages; while the saving in time and wear and tear of wagons, harness, and teams would amply offset reasonable railway charges.—Scientific American.

—The United States Fish Commission at Washington has been distributing carp to applicants in various parts of the country, to enable them to stock ponds with this fish, which is highly esteemed for the table. A correspondent of the New York Tribune vouches for a statement which shows how rapidly these fish grow. "There is a carp now at the Smithsonian Institution," he says, "which, as a young fish an inch or two in length, was sent to Georgia and placed in a pond, where it remained less than a year, when it was sent back to Washington weighing seven pounds." They grow about twice as fast in the Southern States as in the North.

I WILL sell privately, on reasonable terms, my place known as Edgewood, on the Lexington turnpike, one and a fourth miles from Maysville. The tract contains 17 acres, more or less, and has on it a brick house of seven rooms and a kitchen, a good stable, and all other necessary outbuildings, together with a good tenant house of three rooms. The place is well-watered, has on it a good bearing fruit orchard of all varieties, is well adapted to gardening and being convenient to the city is very desirable. This perfect. For terms ap-
